To help reduce data usage, Data Saver prevents some apps from sending or receiving data in the background. An app you're currently using can access data, but may do so less frequently. This may mean, for example, that images don't display until you tap them.

Should i use data saver on android. Should data saver be on or off on android phone. How to use data saver on android.

While some people have unlimited mobile data plans, many aren't that lucky. Unfortunately, apps and Google don't always care how much data you have left on your plan. To avoid unplanned data usage, you can turn on Data Saver on Android. While it's not perfect, it does give you much more control over the data use each month. What Is Data Saver? Google released Data Saver on Android 7.0 and later releases. If you have an older version, you won't be able to use the feature, sadly. First, it's important to know this isn't the Data Saver feature available in Chrome for Android. This is Android's system setting. Data Saver is designed to let you toggle on/off which apps you will allow to use background data. Developers have to incorporate this feature into their apps. According to Google, when an app is turned off in Data Saver, meaning restricted data, the following should occur: No autoplay on videosNo prefetching contentRestrict automatic downloads, including updatesDon't ask users to whitelist the app (apps can explain whether background data is a necessity or not, though)Compress data if possibleProvide lower bit-rate and lower resolution video and imagesRemove any unnecessary images This is for all apps available through the Play Store, including Google Play Store and Google Play Services. Third-party apps that you install from other sources may not respect Data Saver. When this mode is turned on, only the apps you select should be able to access background data. For instance, you may allow your weather apps to update the temperature and send alerts, or you may enable your email app to check for new mail. While there isn't a guarantee that apps will completely obey the rules, you will drastically reduce background data usage, saving you money on limited data plans. Enable Data Saver on Android To enable Data Saver on Android, open Settings on your Android device. Notice the extra icon circled in the image? That's the Data Saver icon. It only appears when the feature is enabled. Even though I have an unlimited plan, I still use the feature to prevent certain apps from running constantly in the background and slowing down my device, so that's an extra benefit. Tap "Network & Internet" and choose "Data Usage." Tap the menu at the top right of the window and select "Data Saver." Toggle the Data Saver switch to On. Tap "Unrestricted data access" underneath the Data Saver toggle to turn apps on and off. It takes a few seconds, but the 0 changes to the number of apps that use your mobile data freely. Apps toggled to On use mobile data whenever they want or need to. If you toggle an app to Off, its data is restricted. While some apps are enabled by default, toggle them off if you don't need them. I currently allow 16 apps access, one of which is the built-in security app from my carrier, which works surprisingly well. If you've already turned off background data within an individual app's settings, you'll see a message saying background data is already disabled. You can change your settings at any time within the Data Saver settings. For instance, if you didn't toggle your messaging app to on, you might not receive notifications about new messages or might not even receive messages until you open the app. Obviously, the more restricted apps you have, the less data your device uses. Another feature that may also help is "Limit mobile data usage." You'll find the setting within "Data Usage" where you accessed Data Saver. Toggle the option on to turn off all data when you reach a set limit. This will at least help you to not go over. You may also want to track which app is using the most data so you can monitor or replace it. If instead your issue lies with your mobile data not working on Android, check out the solution here. Is this article useful? It's the middle of the month, and you receive an alert saying you only have 10% of your data left...followed by a sinking feeling in your stomach. Luckily, you can keep tabs and set limits on your data using your Galaxy phone's settings. They really come in handy when you're in a data crunch. Note: Available screens and settings may vary by wireless service provider, software version, and phone model. Do you know where your data is? Track your data usage to make sure you never run out. Navigate to and open Settings, then tap Connections, and then tap Data usage to view your Mobile data usage or Wi-Fi data usage. The options may be slightly different depending on what carrier you have, but here are the general settings you can adjust from this page. Data saver: Helps cut down your data usage by preventing apps from using data in the background. Mobile data: Access the internet through your mobile network. You can turn mobile data on or off by tapping the switch. Mobile data only apps: Set apps to always use mobile data, even when your phone is connected to Wi-Fi. Mobile data usage: Get a more detailed breakdown of your data usage, such as which apps used the most data. Billing cycle and data warning: Set limits or warnings to make sure you don't overuse your data. Please see the section titled "Data billing cycle settings." Wi-Fi data usage: Get a more detailed breakdown of your Wi-Fi usage, such as which apps used Wi-Fi the most. Data saver prevents some apps from sending or receiving data in the background. So rest assured, you're not wasting any precious data. Navigate to and open Settings, and then tap Connections. Tap Data usage, tap Data saver, and then tap the switch next to Turn on now. If there are still some apps you'd like to run in the background, you can set them as exceptions. Tap Allowed to use data while Data saver is on at the bottom of the screen. Tap More options (the three vertical dots) and choose Show system apps or Show allowed apps first to narrow down the list. Finally, tap the switch(es) next to your desired app(s). Another weapon in your arsenal is the Data usage settings. This will tell you when you're nearing the end of your billing cycle and warn you when data is running low. Navigate to and open Settings, tap Connections, and then tap Data usage. Tap Billing cycle and data warning, and then check out the following settings: Start billing cycle on: Set the date when your billing cycle starts to keep track of your mobile data usage. Set data warning: Turn the data warning feature on or off by tapping the switch. Data warning: Set the amount of data to use before receiving a warning about your usage. Limit mobile data usage: Turn the limit mobile data feature on or off by tapping the switch. Note: With some carriers, this feature may be called Set data limit. Data limit: Set the amount of data you can use before mobile data is disabled. If you leave your carrier's coverage area, you may still be able to access mobile data by enabling Data roaming. Most carriers work together to allow you to connect to other networks, even outside of the United States. Before you turn on Data roaming, please be aware that there may be additional charges from your carrier, especially outside of the country. Contact your carrier for details before enabling Data roaming. When you're ready to turn it on, navigate to Settings, and then tap Connections. Tap Mobile networks, and then tap the switch next to Data Roaming Access to enable or disable the feature. Note: The steps for activating this option may differ depending on what carrier you have. If you're on a capped data plan or if you like watching Neon on your mobile, Data Saver is here for you!Data Saver lets you control how much data you're using by choosing the video quality that's right for you.To get started, play a show and press the 'cog' icon in the top right of the player controls. You can then choose which data setting you'd like to play the video with. 'Saver' uses the least data, and is lower quality video - whilst 'High' uses the most data and will use the highest quality video available.You can also choose your Data Saver settings from the hamburger menu in the top left. Open the menu, choose 'Settings'. Here you can set your preferences for video on both Mobile connections (e.g whilst you're on the go) and WiFi (e.g whilst you're on a home WiFi connection). In each, you can choose either 'Saver' mode to restrict your viewing to low data usage, 'Standard' for a better viewing experience whilst not using up too much data or 'High' if data is no issue for the best viewing experience possible.Settings can be managed based on your connection type. Mobile Data connections will default to Saver mode and WiFi is set to High. You can adjust your setting from either the menu or player.Saver - Uses least data (up to 0.5 GB per hour)Standard - Standard Definition (up to 1 GB per hour)High - High Definition (up to 3 GB per hour)If you do not wish to use Mobile Data when out of range of WiFi, this can be disabled from your Android mobile settings and switching off Mobile Data.* Lower quality video may still be used on the High setting if your network connection is not capable of streaming high quality video.Note: The data saver option is not available when casting NEON on the big screen, instead it will automatically choose the best available quality based on your internet speed.HD is no available on a Basic Plan.
